

Teikyo University Graduate School of Public Health
Harvard Special Session 2015
January, 2015

Every January Teikyo has invited five professors from Harvard University, University of Cambridge and Durham University to provide intensive courses of lectures for our graduate program of public health since 2012 when the school program commenced. The courses cover five frames required by the Council of Education for Public Health: Epidemiology, Biostatistics, Environmental Health Sciences, Health Policy and Management, and Social and Behavioral Sciences.

As the abridged version of the lectures of Harvard School of Public Health, the certificates authorized by professors of both Teikyo and Harvard University are issued to students upon completion of these courses. This special session is a part of the Teikyo-Harvard Program which both institutes have agreed to continue next ten years.

The past three sessions attracted students from the United States and Asian countries such as Thailand, the Philippines, and China, and they brought a global atmosphere to classroom. We welcome and look forward to having participants from many countries.

We will accept applications from October.
